In New York: Gallery Openings this Weekend

“Baker, Braunig, Gokita, Hopkins,” at Foxy Production, 623 West 27th Street, through May 1, opening April 2, 6–8 p.m.

Don't let this show's low-key, law-firm-style title obscure the dark intents of its four artists. Jimmy Bakers lush landscapes share the uneasy intrigue of Luc Tuymans paintings, offering expansive views of territories whose unmarked buildings and smoke-filled skies seem to harbor clandestine affairs. Violet Hopkins, meanwhile, draws spindly, tentacled Rorschach inkblots on black paper, offering uncanny horrors in place of the carnal pleasures Warhol teased from that motif. The figural half of the show is represented by Tomoo Gokita, who deforms the polished noir subjects of McDermott & McGough with abstract washes and spills, and Sascha Braunig, who endows her female subjects with fluorescent glows and supernatural stares.
